Mark your calendars to join Rural Community Assistance Corporation (RCAC) for a one-half day workshop to learn about the Individual Well Program and the well assessment tool, the best practices for outreach and educating well owners, and how to create a successful well program.

Improving water quality through training and technical assistance to private well owners' will help protect public health and the environment and ensure that there is safe water available for future generations. Having a successful well program means gaining the trust and understanding in the communities where you work and allowing you to do your job successfully. Learn how to have a successful well program by forming long and lasting partnership and where to find the well resources available.

The workshop is open to all health and environmental professionals, well inspectors and others, who work and interact with well owners or would like to start working with well owners to provide them safe drinking water.

Join your colleagues and RCAC to learn how, earn contact hours and join the networking fun meeting people in your profession to form those possible partnerships. We will show you how!
